Designing a webpage is a broad term, it is the way that encompass the content (usually hypertext or hypermedia) and delivered to an end-user through the World Wide Web, using a web browser or other web-enabled software to display the content. The intent of web design is to create a website, a collection of online content (dynamic or static electronic files including documents and applications) residing on a web server. A website may include text, images, sounds and other contents or it may be the interactive of all.
